THOUSAND PERSONS WITNESS COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

Washington Seminary Students Receive Their Rewards-Address by Mrs. Della G. Smallwood.

In the presence of nearly a thousand persons, ten fair young graduates of Washington Seminary were awarded their diplomas at the Gunton Memorial Presbyterian Church last night. The platform was a bower of roses and flowers, and the walls of the auditorium were beautifully decorated with greens and flowers and the colors of the school. Mrs. Della G. Smallwood, president of the school, presided, and presented the diplomas following an address on "Liberty and License."

The ten graduates marched into the auditorium single file, carrying a long chain of daisies, and when they took their seats on the platform they retained hold upon the chain. They were followed by the undergraduates, who took seats in the front rows. The exercises were opened with the salutatory, an essay on "Citizenship" by Katherine Louise Ladd of the District of Columbia. The remainder of the program consisted of: Essay, "Marie Antoinette," Clara Marie Holderman, Ohio; violin solo, Alice Maynard Ripley Michigal Columbia. violin solo. Claimed Absolute Power.

"Religious liberty was unknown to ancient or mediaeval nations. Kings and emperors claimed absolute power. Religion was only one of many divisions of this power, and even enlightened Rome made religious laws as a natural department of state affairs. Rulers were hostile to Christianity because it encouraged personal judgments. When kings became Christian they still exercised this authority. Religious liberty could only be possible in new lands, and America was settled. When independence was attained the Constitution protected this right, and today its influence felt in letter and spirit throughout all
